The Bonnies --- What Makes 'em Tick?

By BOB DAVIES
Dec. 9th, 1967.
It was the night St. Bona beat Toledo, 94-89, in overtime.

It was the beginning of the rainbrow that could end in Los Angeles two weeks from today. That victory — coming early in the 1967-68 basketball season, on the road and over a well-regarded foe — convinced the Brown Indians they had the fire power required for a great season. IT HAS been a tremendously successful season.

The record speaks eloquently. This season the Bonnies did it smoothly — no sweating out the post season tournament bidding tension. The Bona troupe knew how it stood in both NCAA and NIT camps. It was the NCAA, and rightly so. It's the king-maker tournament of college basketball. The big leagues. The players — to a man —
