ANDREW D. BLOOD.

A letter from I. Hodkins, late of Co. F, 59th Mass., to Alex Bird, says: Your communication to Comrade Andrew D. Blood was received at his late home the 12th inst. The family desire that I express their thanks to you for your kindness towards him. Comrade Blood died, Oct. 9th at 8 a. m., of valvular heart trouble. His end came without a struggle.

I had the privilege of attending with him your reunion, this year, and the many kindnesses shown me by the comrades of the famous 154th I shall never forget.

Now it falls to my lot to apprise you that one of the noblest of men as well as a valiant soldier has passed over the river, there to await the grand reunion when every soldier of Jesus Christ shall receive their coronation.

I trust that in that day the boys of the noble 154th N. Y. that wear the badge of honor here shall wear the crown of glory there.

With you brave boys of his regiment I mourn. Soon the taps will be sounded as the last veteran of the war of 61-5 is laid away, then the nation may awake to the fact that at least it owed a debt of sympathy if not of gratitude to the boys in blue.
