

ST. BONA STUDENTS MAKE BIG HIT IN IRISH COMEDY

The students of St. Bonaventure's College scored another success last night at Alumni Hall, where they staged the musical comedy, "My Irish Rose." The college thespians gave a finished exhibition of female impersonations that won the approval of an appreciative audience.

"My Irish Rose" is a three act musical comedy, and the action takes place in County Kildare. The piece is brimful of pep at all times, and it affords the players ample opportunity to display their histrionic talents. All of the musical numbers were in harmony with the settings and they were "put over" nicely. "My Isle of Dreams," a song number especially written for this production by "Bill" Tracey and "Willie" Moore, was introduced by "Marty" Daly and it made an instant hit with the house. Whitney Geoghegan won his way into the hearts of his audience with that captivating song, "The Irish were Egyptians Long Ago."

M. F. Burke as the young Dublin artist was very good. F. X. McIntyre as the "Irish Rose," gave a neat exhibition of female impersonation. He had all the charm and gracefulness that are common to the other sex. Martin A. Yatsko as Shawn McGilly, the laziest man in the County Kildare, was at his best in this character role and he handled the part cleverly, as the applause of those present testified.

The coach of this production, Mr. Yanner, is being congratulated on his success and there is no doubt but the play would be received favorably if it were to be taken on tour.
