

Not bad:-

After the dinge owner informed the prospective purchaser that the boat for sale was in good condition, the customer inspected the craft. He pointed out a loose board here, two holes there, another loose board, a couple of more holes. And informed the owner he certainly wouldn't buy a boat in such condition. The owner thought for a moment. Then: "Boy, yo' suah drive a hard bargain. Now yo' makes me include a life preserver."...

Gag) Very silly, I thought was the tale of the colored salesman who was trying to sell a ~~boat~~ boat to another gentleman of color.

Oh had dis boat for years, the owner said and ah grew to love it. In fact ah wouldn't part with it now only ah needs money, an you is mah friend.
Is it a good boat, the prospective buyer enquired?

Good, replied the seller, why it perfect. Dey aint no better on de ribber, dan dis lil ole boat.

 She buyes upon examination, present out quit a few weak joints, about she perfect lil ole boat. Dis board keak is loose,  keak two holes, an keak two mah holes an another board loose. Ah dont buy no ole boat like dat.

The owner thought for a moment then smiled broadly and said - Boy you sho drive a hard bargain.
 Now you makes me include a life belt.
